ABSTRACT

The manual describes a program in survival skills for use with delinquent youth. The program covers the following six areas of functional competency: interpersonal relations, occupational knowledge, consumer awareness, law, health, and community resources. The skills necessary for successful functioning are listed as communication, interpersonal relations, computation, and problem solving. The goal and objectives of each of the six areas of competency are outlined. A list of materials for teaching each of the areas is provided along with the reading difficulty grade level, availability of audio tapes, suitability for group or individual instruction, and the publisher. A sampling of the worksheets for each of the six knowledge areas is provided. (PHR)

OSBORNE SCHOOL

URBAN SURVIVAL PROGRAM

The primary goal of Osborne School at the Juvenile Center in San Jose is to provide a continuing education for the students who are detained and denied all access to other sources of formal education.

Students come from throughout Santa Clara County's diverse cities; from Palo Alto in the North to Gilroy in the South. Total attendance is 8,000-10,000 throughout a 12-month school year with average daily attendance at 280 students. The school program is severely restricted by the fact that students stay in Osborne School for an average of only three weeks while a few stay as long as three months. The courses available include Urban Survival, Language Arts (for the intermediate level), Social Studies, Shop, Art, P.E., Math, Human Awareness (Family Life Education), and Home Economics.

Academic potential ranges from low average to gifted with a mean slightly below that of the national average. Both boys and girls range in age from 12 to 17 with the mode at 15 years. Student language skills are generally poor as is their awareness of their social environment. Over 50% of the students read below the sixth grade level with a third having specific learning disabilities contributing to their overall deficiencies. Most may be described as reluctant learners.

The Urban Survival (survival skills) program has been developed over the past two years. The course is based on the findings of the Adult Performance Level Project (APL) at the University of Texas in 1975.

Nationwide APL research made it clear what knowledge, skills, and problem-solving ability a person must have in order to function adequately as an adult. Only 50% of the adult population was found to be functionally competent. Overall, approximately one-fifth of U.S. adults are functioning with real difficulty.

Osborne School Urban Survival Program (continued)

After two years of experience at Osborne School, we find there are few students in Juvenile Hall who demonstrate competency in all survival skills identified in the APL study. The vast majority have readily identifiable deficiencies in several knowledge areas. These findings make the survival skills approach appropriate for the real needs of the students we serve.

f.11 activities have been categorized under knowledge areas and skills. The knowledge areas are:

- 1. interpersonal relations
- 2. occupational knowledge
- 3. consumer awareness
- 4. law
- 5. health
- 6. community resources

Within these general areas of knowledge, there are skills necessary for successful functioning. These fall into four areas:

- 1. Communication (reading, writing, speaking and listening).
- 2. Interpersonal Relations (personal acceptance, personal responsibility for actions, verbalization of feelings).
- 3. Computation (basic math and money management).
- 4. Problem-solving (determining consequences of action, decision-making skills).

Interpersonal relations is seen as both an area of knowledge and as a skill. A person may have the knowledge necessary to properly approach his/her employer about a problem at work, but he/she may not have the required level of trust and self confidence (skills) to initiate a resolution by talking with this person.

When a student first enters the Urban Survival class, he/she is given the APL High School Survey. Results of this 40-item test gives an indication of the student's functional competency in five knowledge areas: community resources, occupational knowledge, health, government and law, and consumer economics; and an indication of strengths and weaknesses in five skill areas: reading, identification of facts and terms, writing, computation and problem-solving.

The student is then assigned individual work from the learning materials list in the area(s) of his/her relative weakness. Should further assessment be needed, one of the APL Content Area Measures may be given in a specific area such as law or occupational knowledge. If there is doubt about the student's visual strengths relative to auditory strengths, the Visual Aural Digit Span test may be given.

In each area throughout the Urban Survival curriculum, we have developed, selected and adapted material for students with a wide range of learning abilities, including material for auditory and/or visual learners. For example, a student who is working in personal finances may prefer to learn how to manage a checking account by watching a sound filmstrip rather than reading the same information from a workbook.

Objectives in the following pages under the heading "Interpersonal Relations" are directly addressed during group activities and discussion two days a week. The focus may vary from values clarification to role playing personal conflicts to perhaps video taped job interviews. Three days a week are spent on individual assignments in the areas of relative weaknesses indicated on the APL High School Survey.

The Survival Skills Program is designed primarily to assist student in learning skills that will clearly make them more competent adults no matter what vocation they may choose. It may be used for short-term or long-term programs. In addition, the curriculum overlaps nicely the AB 65 proficiency standards developed by many districts for graduating high school seniors.

URBAN SURVIVAL COURSE OBJECTIVES

INTERPERSONAL RELATIONS

GOAL:

To promote an awareness of what actions give value to a relationship with self and others.

OBJECTIVES:

- 1. To demonstrate consideration of others during all activities in the classroom.
- To be aware of the basic needs common to all people and the diverse ways these needs may be met.
- 3. To outline basic emotions and be able to identify the experience of some emotions and to express appropriately some of the emotions experienced.
- 4. To identify the characteristics of good employeeemployer, worker-co-worker, and employee-customer relationships, and be aware of the skills necessary to resolve conflicts.
- 5. To identify the behavior and values that support rewarding relationships.
- 6. To outline the process of effective verbal and non-verbal communications.
- 7. To identify and clarify values and attitudes that each person feels are important to pass on to children.
- 8. To identify re-occurring patterns of behavior that have not produced satisfaction and to outline behavior that might be more satisfying.
- 9. Given the fact that consequences of behavior are determined by laws of relationships, the students will discuss what laws of relationship each person has discovered.

COMMUNITY RÉSOURCES

GOAL:

To allow the students to gain the necessary knowledge to make transportation systems and community resources work for them.

OBJECTIVES:

- 1. To understand and use the California Vehicle Code Summary regulations concerning safety, courtesy, insurance, etc.

An Agreement That Was Hard to Keep"

Responsibility
An Innerchange Circle Session

33b

Objectives:

to allow students to identify and discuss commitments they made which were difficult to honor. They may also become more aware of choices they have in the area of accepting responsibility.

Stating the topic:

"Today the topic is 'An Agreement .
That Was Hard to Keep.' This can be any kind of agreement—a promise, a contract, a commitment, etc. Notice that you can go either way with this topic; you can talk about how you did keep your promise, even though it was difficult, or you can talk about a time when you did not follow though on your word because it was too difficult.

"Some of the key words here, as you may have noticed, are 'agreements,' 'promise,' 'contract,' 'commitment,' 'follow through,' and 'your word.' They all relate to a time when you accepted responsibility for something, and you let someone know you could be counted on. Maybe this was something that didn't seem so overwhelming at first, but after you got into it, you found out that it was a huge task. Or maybe you knew right from the beginning what you were getting into. Either way, think it over and then, if you will, tell us about it. The topic is 'An Agreement Thot Was Hord to Keep.'"

Optional discussion question:

1. "How did you feel about the agreement when you realized it would be hard to keep? Did you take it seriously?"

Cognitive summary (final 2-8 minutes)

- 1. "In what way do you think this topic relates to responsibility?"
- 2. "What did you notice or learn in this session that you would like to mention?"

December

Make a calendar.

Write the name of this month and the number of this year at the top.

Write the names of the days of the week.

Building language skills—Vocabulary: Introduce the names of the months and the use of the calendar. Many of these words are irregular in spelling and must be learned as sight words. Do not expect your students to master the pronunciation or learn the words in one class period. Review them often until they are learned. Bring a calendar to class, and explain how it is used. Then help the students write the current month and year and make their own calendar in the book. Point out that the first day of the month does not necessarily fall on Sunday.

WELCOME NEIGHBOR!

THE LAW

Mini-Case to Accompany Tape Eighteen

WHO GOES WHERE?

"Dad says it's up to us. We can live with either him or Mom. He'll be glad to have us." Realizing his sister, Laurie, 11, wanted to talk, Tom 16, put down the book in which he had been studying.

"Tom," Laurie said, "I don't want to decide. I love them both. Why can't we all stay together the way we always have?"

Tom was patient. "I don't want to decide either. But it's not up to us. They're going to get a divorce and Dad is moving out. Mom is going to go to work. She says with the money she makes and with what Dad pays to support us we can stay in this house.

"The trouble is," Tom continued, "Dad wants us too. He says I'm old enough to decide for myself. I can pick who I want to live with because I'm more than 14. But, since you're only 11, you will have to stay with Mom."

"Don't leave, Tom." Laurie was begging. "With Mom and Dad fighting all the time, you're all I have. I'm scared."

The blonde woman who had been weeding the front yard under the window finally could not take it any more. She dropped her tools and gardening gloves and stole quietly into a darkened back bedroom for another session of silent sobbing.

You won't have all the answers to the questions which follow. But do your best. Think about what you've learned. Your teacher will be able to help with answers and explanations.

Instructions to follow when involved in an accident:

Every driver involved in an accident is legally required to remain at the scene of the accident, render aid, and give pertinent information to others involved and to law enforcement officers.

- 1. Use every method possible to warn oncoming traffic of the danger at the scene of the accident.
- 2. Give reasonable aid to the injured. Do not move them unless it is absolutely necessary.
- 3. Notify the State Patrol, police or sheriff, and request a doctor and ambulance if needed.
- 4. Obtain and give necessary information for the accident report, including names of witnesses and police officers.
- 5. If there is an injury, death or $100 damage to any one person's property, make a full written report of the accident within 24 hours. The report should be given to the State Patrol, city police or sheriff.

When involved in a collision with an unattended vehicle, leave pertinent information in a conspicuous place on the damaged property. Try to locate the owner, and then report the accident to the proper authorities.

20. Accident Instructions

	If you are involved in an accident, is it all right to leave the scene if the accident was not your fault?
2.	If you must file an accident report, how much time do you have to file it?
3.	To whom should you give the accident report?
	If there was property damage of $150 and someone was injured, must you file an accident report?
5.	If there was $50 property damage and no one was hurt, must you file an accident report?
6.	What should you do about traffic before the police get to the scene?
7.	What words in the instructions say you should leave a note with your name, address, and phone number on the parked car you just dented?
Ω	What do you think? Why shouldn't injured persons be moved?
	Why should you get the names of witnesses?
0.	What information should the drivers involved in the accident give each other?

GOOD-BUY!

Here's your chance to rate yourself on shopping skills. Look at the questions on this page. Then put dots on the chart to show your answers to the questions. Each question can be answered by "always," "usually," "sometimes," "seldom," or "never." For example, suppose your answer to the first question is "usually." You would put a dot on the chart across from "usually" — on the chart's line for the first question.

After you finish, connect all of your dots with a line. Is the line mostly near the top of the chart? Or is it mostly near the bottom? How do you rate as a smart shopper?

- 1. I compare brands to see which brand is a better buy.
- 2. I avoid buying things I don't really need.
- 3. I read labels to make sure that the item suits my needs.
- 4.1 budget my money so I know how it is being spent.
- 5.1 count my change.
- 6. I check to make sure the price on an item that is marked "reduced" or "special" really is.
- 7. I return things that are broken or do not work.

- 8. I take into account the "hidden cost" of items (batteries, etc.) when I make a purchase.
- 9. I save sales slips and receipts.
- I check to see if something can be returned or exchanged before I buy it.
- 11. I keep guarantees and warranties in a safe place.
- I have some money set aside for emergencies or unexpected expenses.
- 13. I keep my clothes and personal property in good condition.
- 14. I make sure that all "promises" and guarantees are put in writing.
- 15. I read food labels to figure out the cost per serving.
- 16. I know the terms of a warranty before I make a purchase.
- 17. I ask for a written estimate before I have something repaired.

LOANS AND CREDIT - Promissory Notes

Below is one form of the Promissory Note. Each bank or loan company will have its own forms. All of the notes will contain the same type of information.

PART THREE

OBJECTIVE:

IDENTIFY VARIOUS ADVERTISING TECHNIQUES AND APPEALS BY CORRECTLY MATCHING EACH APPEAL OR TECHNIQUE WITH THE APPROPRIATE DESCRIPTIVE PHASE.

Now that we have a pretty good idea of what advertising is and how it might be classified into three basic categories according to the audience it is designed to reach, let's take a good look at some of the more popular approaches or appeals which are used in advertisements today.

INFORMATION Ads which give simple, direct information are limited pretty much to classified ads, or general ads for equipment such as typewriters, lawnmowers, pocket calculators, etc.

STATUS If you use the product, you will be one of those who "made it," one who uses only the best, one who has climbed the ladder of success.

PFER APPROVAL If you want more friends, who like you better, and want to have more fun, then use the product. The reverse approach is sometimes used when an ad implies that if you don't use the product, you will offend people without knowing it.

GOOD TASTE

By using the product, you show that you're the kind of person who enjoys the finer things of life, that you're really "cool" and relaxed about yourself.

PART THREE (continued)

HERO ENDORSEMENT These ads are designed to make you feel that if you use the product, you will become like the well-known person who endorses the product.

SEXUAL ATTRACTION If you use the product, members of the opposite sex will fight over your charms. If you don't use it, you will always be a "wallflower."

JOIN THE GANG Everybody else is using the product, why don't you? That's the "pitch" used by this kind of ad.

ENTERTAINMENT Some ads, particularly TV and radio commercials, are mostly entertainment. But underneath the entertainment, the advertiser wants you to remember the product by association with something you enjoyed.

INTELLIGENCE This approach suggests that if you use the product, you are sensible and able to avoid advertising gimmicks. You can make up your own mind about what you want to buy or use.

INDEPENDENCE If you use the product, people will know that you think and act for yourself, that you don't care what the rest of the world thinks, that you don't really need popular consumer products, and that you're buying after-shave or suntan lotion because you WANT to.

DANGLING

COMPARATIVES A much used and possibly dangerous device. Statements such as "makes you 100% healthier" - healthier than WHAT??; or "stops better on wet roads" better than WHAT??

You might be able to think of other techniques and appeals used in advertising today, but this list contains most of the popular ones. An individual advertisement may use more than one appeal, combining several in a complicated pattern designed to make you want to buy. A good way to test your understanding of these appeals is to read or watch ads and commercials and determine which appeals are being used.

Mrs. Valdez began to read the labels on food items. She learned that the government has made it a law that labels on foods list the ingredients. Ingredients are listed in order of quantity. The ingredient listed first is the one with the largest amount found in the food.

Directions: Use the food label above to answer each question.

1.	Which ingredient is there most of in this food item?
2.	What information does the left side of the label tell you?
3.	What is the size per serving given?
4.	What does U.S. RDA mean?
5.	How much does this food item contain of the U.S. RDA?
